A Timothy West

Timothy's parents were both actors and Timothy, their eldest child, was born in Bradford where the acting company happened to be at the time. Following his parents around meant that Timothy passed through thirteen different schools, but from an early age he was either backstage, watching plays or even befriending actors more than children his own age. Timothy's young life was a succession of furnished rooms and travel – which did a lot for his future. 'If you want to be an actor, the more you see of life the more your chances are of being good.' But his parents discouraged him from joining the profession. He studied languages, sold office furniture and worked as a recording engineer. In the end, he went against his parents' advice as the profession was in his blood.

B Lulu

The young girl who went on to write and record hits has vivid childhood memories. Lulu was a real tomboy – a city girl roller skating the pavements followed by her younger siblings. However, despite enjoying rough, boyish activities, Lulu always wore dresses and bows in her hair. She didn't focus on what the teachers were telling her and her ambition was to be 'a hairdresser or a singer in a dance hall.' She realised both by marrying a hairdresser and singing all over the place.

C Trevor McDonald

Trevor grew up in Trinidad and had a fairly ordinary childhood. He and his brother and two sisters lived with their parents in a small rural community. The children were happy but they were also pushed. 'You either made it or you didn't'. Trevor's best memories are of 'enormous fun making our own games. I remember reluctantly walking home after a fun day knowing that when I got home there was the housework and my homework to do. The need to do homework was a constant refrain.' Trevor succeeded beyond his parents' imagination. He studied hard and following a job on Radio Trinidad, began working in London for BBC Radio. No doubt the boy would be amazed at the man he had become.

D Miriam Margolyes

Miriam's father was a doctor, which gave him social standing. However, the family were not members of the university in Oxford where they lived, which made them feel outsiders. Miriam arrived late in the marriage and was an only child. But Miriam was happy, especially at school. She was a bright, naughty child. 'I was a show-off and loved to shock and that hasn't changed. It's part of being an actress. From as early as I can remember I loved being a performer.' Success hasn't affected Miriam. 'I'm just as I was as a child – happier because I can control things more.'

Susan: I know she (8) _____ (not/eat) so much these days and (9) _____ (go) jogging really regularly. I've decided I need to do more exercise too and I (10) _____ (start) Zumba classes at the gym next Monday and as I've already signed up, I can't make excuses not to go. Anyway, why don't we have a coffee together and catch up?

John: That's a good idea. I (11) _____ (just/finish) doing the shopping, but I still have to go to the post office. I (12) _____ (meet) you over in the coffee shop in about 10 minutes if that's ok with you.

Susan: That's no problem. See you in a few minutes then.

Read part of the email which you have recently received from your British penfriend, Sally, who is coming to stay with you for a week during the Easter holidays.

I am arriving by train and as I have never been to Switzerland before, could you suggest somewhere we could meet which would be easy for me to find? While I'm in Switzerland I would also really like to do some sightseeing and so I'd be grateful if you could suggest a couple of places which you think might interest me and tell me something about them. It would be great if we could possibly do some sport together as well. Do you have any suggestions as to what we can do? Finally, could you also let me know what the weather will be like so that I can decide on what clothes I should bring?

All the best,
Sally
